Is it Carpal Tunnel?

Feeling pins and needles? Tingling? Swelling? Numbness? Loss of strength? They can all be early warning signs of carpal tunnel syndrome – especially if your symptoms are in the thumb, or pointer or middle finger.

“Not all hand pain is carpal tunnel syndrome, of course,” says hand surgeon Carol Fouad, MD, who sees patients in Stow, Munroe Falls and Canton. “It’s a very specific nerve issue with telltale signs. When the carpal tunnel, a passageway in your wrist, becomes too crowded because of inflammation or compression, you get pressure on your median nerve which manifests as these symptoms.”

If this sounds like you, it’s time to consult your doctor to rule out other hand or wrist issues and start your path to relief. Expect a few tests during your visit.

Carol Fouad, MD

Splints and Medication

Does your hand pain wake you up from sleep? “Most people don’t realize they bend their wrists while sleeping,” says Dr. Fouad. “That’s why many patients have nighttime or early morning symptoms. Wearing a wrist splint can make a big difference because it keeps your wrists straight, avoiding pressure on your nerve.”

Wearing a splint during the day may help, too. Although there’s no direct link between certain jobs and carpal tunnel, repetitive activities or hobbies – like typing on a computer keyboard or working on an assembly line – can take a toll.

“You can try anti-inflammatories for pain relief, but the relief may be temporary,” she says. “The same is true of ice. Icing traumatic or arthritic conditions provides relief, but the issues with carpal tunnel are often compressive so ice won’t provide lasting relief.”

Seek treatment for tougher cases

If wearing splints and changing your movement doesn’t help, your doctor may recommend cortisone injections. “For many, injections provide relief for months,” says Dr. Fouad.

In more severe cases, surgery may be your best option. The good news is carpal tunnel surgery is common, has a high rate of success and is usually done under local anesthesia. Most people can return to regular activities within four weeks.

To schedule an appointment with Dr. Fouad or another Cleveland Clinic Akron General hand specialist, call 330.344.2663.

Ugly Veins Visible on Your Legs? Help Is Available!

For many people, summer is a time when they break out their shorts and let their legs see the light of day for the first time in months. If unsightly veins are visible on those legs, it might be time to look into treatment options.

Veins that are visible through the skin can be spider veins, which are relatively minor, or they can be a more serious version, varicose veins. In general, varicose veins have a rope-like appearance and can bulge out of the skin. They can be painful and can lead to swelling and burning in the feet and legs, especially after a person stands for a prolonged time.

“Varicose veins are most common in women who have had at least one baby in the past, but men can get them too. In fact, men usually get them at a younger age than women because theirs are caused by hereditary factors,” says Loren Masterson, MD, a vascular surgeon at Cleveland Clinic Akron General.

Veins that are visible but that are smaller and do not cause any pain or swelling are usually spider veins.

“Seeing a doctor to learn which type you have is an important first step because spider veins are much easier to repair than varicose veins, although insurance does not cover them because their removal is usually a cosmetic matter,” says Dr. Masterson.

Treatments

Most spider veins can be removed with injections known as sclerotherapy. The fluid in the injections, a saline solution, pushes out the dark tissue that is making the vein visible. The procedure is typically done in a doctor’s office. The entire office visit usually takes about 90 minutes, depending on how many veins are being treated. Results are usually best after about 3 months and the procedure rarely needs to be repeated on those same veins.

Treating varicose veins is more complicated, Dr. Masterson says. After a doctor has confirmed that a patient has varicose veins, he or she will usually order an ultrasound to learn more about how large and deep they are. Most insurance policies will require a person to wear compression garments on their legs for about three months, or more, to see if this helps before agreeing to pay for treatments. Elevating your legs for a while each day can also help reduce swelling in this time.

Once insurance approves treatment, it typically involves in-office laser therapy to reduce the veins closest to the skin, followed by a procedure known as phlebectomy to remove the underlying veins that may be pushing other veins closer to the surface. This combination usually produces very good results after the legs heal.

Get started now

As you can see, the process of removing unwanted veins does take time, so if they are bothering you, the sooner you see a doctor, the sooner you can get started. Most treatment options are painless or involve only a little pain, yet pay dividends for years to come.

To schedule an appointment to see Dr. Masterson or another vein specialist at Cleveland Clinic Akron General, please call 330.344.1400.

Nurse Credits Her 95-Pound Weight Loss to Putting in the Work

When Monica Warnick's mom passed away in 2018, it was the wake-up call she needed to make some changes in her own life.

"My mom died young. Her death was due to a lot of health problems associated with obesity," says Monica, a psychiatric nurse at Cleveland Clinic Akron General. "That was an eye opener. I knew I didn't want the same thing to happen to me. I have a son to think about and I need to be healthy for him."

At 47 years old, Monica had gradually gained weight over the years and discovered she was pre-diabetic. She became discouraged after learning she wasn't a candidate for weight-loss surgery.

Monica was referred to Shweta Diwakar, MD, a medical weight loss physician at Akron General. "I had tried diets in the past and lost weight, but I slowly gained it all back," she says. "I was doubtful that Dr. Diwakar could help me, but I figured I'd at least give it a try."

During Monica's first appointment with Dr. Diwakar in August 2020, they discussed getting her diet and portions under control.

"One of the first things Dr. Diwakar taught me was you can't stick to a plan one day and then cheat the next day," she says. "This must become a way of life."

With 12-hour workdays that don't end until 7:30 p.m., Monica was in the habit of coming home and eating a late dinner. One of Dr. Diwakar's lifestyle changes included not eating anything after 7 p.m. This meant Monica had to make some adjustments to her routine.

"I now have a meal replacement shake for lunch on the days I work and pack my dinner and eat it between 4:30 and 5 p.m. while I'm still at work," she says.

Other changes she has made include completing meals within 30 minutes and waiting at least three hours between meals or snacks in order to give her body time to metabolize the food. A typical meal for Monica now includes 2 to 3 ounces of protein accompanied by fruit, often grapes or strawberries. For snacks, she chooses foods high in protein like beef sticks or hard-boiled eggs.

Another element that Monica has added to her life is exercise. Almost every day, she takes her dog to the park and walks at a brisk pace for three to four miles. She's considering taking up running and hiring a personal trainer to help her tighten up loose skin from her weight loss.

Monica says the hardest part of the journey was just taking the first step and seeking help.

"It's intimidating because you don't know if it will work," she says. "But I've learned that you have to put in the work to make it work."

She credits her success to changing her mealtimes, not grazing, having a better understanding of insulin resistance and reducing her carbohydrates.

"I feel so good. I have so much energy," she says. "I sleep well and wake up rested."

All her lab work, including her cholesterol and blood glucose, are within normal limits, as is her blood pressure. Eighteen months after her first appointment with Dr. Diwakar, she has shed 95 pounds, is 12 sizes smaller and is enjoying shopping for new clothes.

"I look better than I have in years," she says. "I'm so thankful that I met Dr. Diwakar. She's really good at what she does. She takes the time to listen and encourage. She is also able to adjust medications and prescribe appetite suppressants to help with cravings."

Monica's coworkers often ask about the secret to her weight loss, and she gives them all the same advice.

"Anyone can do this, but you have to really want it and be willing to stick with the lifestyle changes for the long haul."

One Yolk Vegetable Frittata

This frittata is full of flavor and nutrients, yet is low in calories. The herbs and variety of vegetables make it an unforgettable dish.

Ingredients

8 egg whites, one egg yolk	½ cup zucchini - fine diced
1 tablespoon canola oil	1 teaspoon turmeric
½ cup Shiitake mushrooms - fine julienne	To taste, salt and pepper
½ cup sweet onion - fine diced	½ cup fresh spinach leaves - stems removed
½ cup red pepper - fine diced	1 whole wheat tortilla

Directions

In a bowl, combine eight egg whites and one egg yolk, and whisk until foamy.

Add 1 tablespoon canola oil to a 10-inch non-stick frying pan and heat pan. When pan becomes hot, add Shiitake mushrooms and stir continuously until mushrooms begin to turn light brown. Then add onion, pepper and zucchini, and season to taste with salt and pepper, stirring frequently.

As soon as the ingredients are stirred and coated with oil, add the turmeric and sauté until vegetables are just becoming tender. Add fresh spinach and cook until wilted. Add beaten eggs evenly around vegetables and begin to gently fold sides inward from rim of pan where the eggs begin to cook, while tilting the pan in direction of the fold to allow the loose uncooked eggs to fill that area and cook. Continually doing this around the pan will very quickly cook the eggs and begin to create the frittata.

At this point, finish cooking the top of the eggs by covering the pan with a plate of the same size. Flip the frittata onto the plate and then slide back into the pan to finish cooking the eggs. Serve on whole wheat tortilla.

Plastic Surgery Can Help You Maximize Function – and Beauty

If you immediately think of facelifts, nose and breast surgery when you see the words plastic surgery, you'd be correct, but plastic surgery is about much more than appearance. Plastic surgery restores form and function.

The Cleveland Clinic Akron General Health & Wellness Center in Bath is now home to two fellowship-trained plastic surgeons who perform both cosmetic and reconstructive plastic surgery, as well as microsurgery.

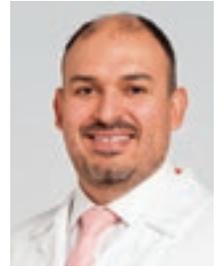

“At age 5, I knew I wanted to help people. I told my mom I wanted to be a priest or a doctor,” says plastic surgeon James Gatherwright, MD. “I’d always been interested in surgery. Plastic surgery gives me the ability to operate on virtually every part of the body and achieve immediate results.”

Dr. Gatherwright, along with his friend and colleague Donald Harvey, MD – a plastic surgeon also trained in all aspects of cosmetic, reconstructive and microsurgery, but with an emphasis on breast surgery – offer a full range of services including:

- Breast reconstruction.
- Post-mastectomy and post-amputation pain.
- Hand surgery and hand reconstruction.
- Lymphedema surgery and lymphatic reconstruction.
- Cosmetic facial surgery including face lifts, forehead/eyebrow lifts, nose surgery and more.
- Injectables including dermal fillers, neuromodulators like Botox and fat injection.
