Why did you choose to study prostate cancer screening practices in primary care?

I was inspired to study prostate cancer (PCa) screening practices over 20 years ago where a study of PCa screening conversations was presented which prompted me to start to ask what did you learn?

What did you learn?

I learned that a wide variation in screening practices existed among my patients, with some providers completely discontinuing screening after the 2012 USPSTF guidelines and others continuing to screen patients. Some of my patients would request screening which would lead to discussion of the risks and benefits while others were not interested in discussing screening.

Why did you choose to study prostate cancer screening practices in primary care?

I was inspired to study prostate cancer (PCa) screening practices over 20 years ago where a study of PCa screening conversations was presented which prompted me to start to ask what did you learn?

What did you learn?

I learned that a wide variation in screening practices existed among my patients, with some providers completely discontinuing screening after the 2012 USPSTF guidelines and others continuing to screen patients. Some of my patients would request screening which would lead to discussion of the risks and benefits while others were not interested in discussing screening.

Why did you choose to study prostate cancer screening practices in primary care?

I was inspired to study prostate cancer (PCa) screening practices over 20 years ago where a study of PCa screening conversations was presented which prompted me to start to ask what did you learn?

What did you learn?

I learned that a wide variation in screening practices existed among my patients, with some providers completely discontinuing screening after the 2012 USPSTF guidelines and others continuing to screen patients. Some of my patients would request screening which would lead to discussion of the risks and benefits while others were not interested in discussing screening.

Why did you choose to study prostate cancer screening practices in primary care?

I was inspired to study prostate cancer (PCa) screening practices over 20 years ago where a study of PCa screening conversations was presented which prompted me to start to ask what did you learn?

What did you learn?

I learned that a wide variation in screening practices existed among my patients, with some providers completely discontinuing screening after the 2012 USPSTF guidelines and others continuing to screen patients. Some of my patients would request screening which would lead to discussion of the risks and benefits while others were not interested in discussing screening.

Why did you choose to study prostate cancer screening practices in primary care?

I was inspired to study prostate cancer (PCa) screening practices over 20 years ago where a study of PCa screening conversations was presented which prompted me to start to ask what did you learn?

What did you learn?

I learned that a wide variation in screening practices existed among my patients, with some providers completely discontinuing screening after the 2012 USPSTF guidelines and others continuing to screen patients. Some of my patients would request screening which would lead to discussion of the risks and benefits while others were not interested in discussing screening.

Why did you choose to study prostate cancer screening practices in primary care?

I was inspired to study prostate cancer (PCa) screening practices over 20 years ago where a study of PCa screening conversations was presented which prompted me to start to ask what did you learn?

What did you learn?

I learned that a wide variation in screening practices existed among my patients, with some providers completely discontinuing screening after the 2012 USPSTF guidelines and others continuing to screen patients. Some of my patients would request screening which would lead to discussion of the risks and benefits while others were not interested in discussing screening.

Why did you choose to study prostate cancer screening practices in primary care?

I was inspired to study prostate cancer (PCa) screening practices over 20 years ago where a study of PCa screening conversations was presented which prompted me to start to ask what did you learn?

What did you learn?

I learned that a wide variation in screening practices existed among my patients, with some providers completely discontinuing screening after the 2012 USPSTF guidelines and others continuing to screen patients. Some of my patients would request screening which would lead to discussion of the risks and benefits while others were not interested in discussing screening.