About the Course

For the second year, we are excited to bring you an update in neurology focused on common, timely and important issues in neurological diseases and their management. We have reviewed comments from last year’s successful course and tried to modify and refine this year’s course to reflect your input. Neurology continues to be a dynamic and expanding area of therapeutic and conceptual advances, which can be challenging, stimulating, and rewarding to the practitioner.

We will continue to provide a time-efficient, entertaining, and primarily case-based course, which emphasizes office neurology while attending to core areas of acute care management. Stroke, dementia, demyelinating disease, epilepsy, sleep disorders, movement disorders and headaches constitute a large part of office neurology and primary care activities and will be prominently reviewed throughout the course. We will update approaches to dizziness, syncope, and statin myopathy, reflecting the fact that these issues present to the neurologist, internist and family physician.

We will again use the audience response system (ARS) format to encourage your active participation. In addition, for the first time we will be adding a self-assessment (SA) component with case-based questions and answers supported by appropriate reference materials. Many boards are moving to SAs as part of the maintenance of certification process and we anticipate this will be a key component of CME activities for years to come. We look forward to working with you during this course and having the chance to learn from your experiences.
